Detroit Strikers Ignore Work Order of WLB

UNION LEADERS CHARGED WITH INTIMIDATION

Only Handful Of Men Seek To Resume Jobs Despite Federal Command

UAW CALLS MEETING Sunday Session To Rule On Resuming War Plant Production

DETROIT, May 22—Charges that union leaders were intimidating workers into prolonging the strike were hurled by a Chrysler spokesman today as only a handful of the 28,000 striking company workers reported on their jobs, under a WLB back-to-work order.

At the same time, a shortage of materials forced the shutdown of the assembly line at the Chrysler tank arsenal, making an additional 2,000 workers idle.

The assertions came after a UAW-CIO sound truck drove up and down in front of the Dodge main plant, where 12,000 are on strike, and urged the thousands of workers gathered in the streets not to return to work pending a meeting tomorrow.

The spokesman said that badge numbers of 200 or 300 returning workers were taken down by other union members stationed at the gates.

"If this isn't intimidation, I don't know what you call it," said the spokesman.

Meeting To Decide

Last night, the Dodge local executive committee which earlier had accepted the WLB order, decided to refer the matter to the union membership at a meeting tomorrow. This is part of the local's "democratic practice," explained the local president, Early Reynolds.

At the Chrysler Kercheval-Jefferson plant where 4,000 workers are on strike, only 700 reported for work, officials reported. But there were no demonstrations or workers congregated in the streets.

The company spokesman attributed the light turnout at the Kercheval-Jefferson plant to the union's alleged failure to notify the strikers that the WLB edict had been accepted by the union.

About two thirds of the 2,500 striking DeSoto employees were back on the job after voting last night to return to work. Officials believed the rest would return when they were informed the strike was over.

At the Dodge truck plant, 4,000 workers were still idle because of lack of parts.

"Very Sorry Showing"

Stating that under these conditions it would be utterly impossible to resume normal production before Monday, the spokesman termed the whole situation "a very sorry showing."

Dr. Edwin E. Witte, regional WLB chairman, said the stoppage was a violation of the national no-strike policy, doubly serious in view of the increasing needs of our armed forces. He said responsibility for the walkouts was

TWO CATS BALK PERFECT CRIME

Yowls For Missing Mistress Start Inquiry, Lead To Husband's Confession

DENVER, May 22—Discovery of the "perfect crime that failed"—the brutal murder of a pretty housewife—was blamed by the alleged murderer today on two pet cats which cried almost continuously for their mistress.

The self-confessed murderer, police alleged, was Hoard C. Potts, 39-year-old shipping clerk, who was arrested after police uncovered the body of his wife, Mary, 34, in a shallow grave in the basement of their East Denver bungalow.

The killing occurred six weeks ago, but it was not until the yowling of the two ordinary gray-and-yellow tiger cats aroused the suspicions of neighbors that the murder was revealed.

"I fed the cats upstairs in the kitchen, but they kept howling," Potts was quoted by police as saying after his arrest.

The neighbors last saw Mrs. Potts about April 3. They described her appearance as "scared" and said she had two black eyes. When police dug the body from its basement grave, it showed evidence of a brutal beating, while one arm was missing.

In his reported confession to authorities, Potts said he and his wife quarreled when she failed to cook a chicken dinner as promised and that he struck her. He then confessed he beat her by the hair and tossed her down the stairway after stomping on her body.

According to Detective Captain James E. Childers, Potts confessed: "I came home about 6 o'clock on the night of April 3. My wife had been drinking. I found a quart bottle from which whiskey had been consumed. We quarreled and in a fit of anger I shoved her down the basement stairway. 'Through the night of April 3, she lay where she had fallen. GENERAL DEVERS SLATED FOR SUNDAY BROADCAST

NEW YORK, May 22—Lieut. Gen. Jacob Devers, newly-appointed commanding general of the European theatre of operations, will broadcast from England tomorrow over "The Army Hour". General Devers recently succeeded Lieut. Gen. Frank Andrews, who was killed in an airplane crash in Iceland.

FLOOD THREATS ON INCREASE IN MIDWEST AREA

Total Of 125,000 Homeless Increased By Hour As Danger Mounts

ENTIRE CITY EVACUATED Mississippi Pounding At Dikes As Far South As Cairo, Ill.

By International News Service Murky sheets of flood wastes continued to ooze out over a vast portion of the breadbasket of democracy today.

Though there were reports of flood tides receding slowly here and there, uncounted millions of acres of farmland remained inundated in a six-state area of the midwest, where much of America's food and that of the United Nations is produced.

The total of those made homeless, already estimated at 125,000, increased by the hour as army personnel and state militiamen were rushed to aid in mass evacuations in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The overall damage to crops was next to impossible to estimate, but in Illinois alone, where the mighty Mississippi and Illinois rivers were on the loose, state authorities reported that at least 350,000 acres of grain would have to be replanted.

Town Evacuated

The situation was most critical at Beardstown, Ill., where the city council early today, ordered the immediate evacuation of all women, children and infirm from a town of 6,500. Against the town's sea wall, the Illinois climbed an inch an hour.

The flood had reached a crest of 27.8 feet, the highest in history for this area. City officials set 7 a. m. today as the zero hour for a complete evacuation. If by that time, the river reaches a crest of 28.6 feet, all whistles and bells in the community will be sounded, warning all residents to vacate single story structures.

Below St. Louis, the Mississippi poured against its dikes as far south as Cairo, Ill., and roared over its banks in areas unprotected by levees.

COAL STRIKERS SUBSIDE; MINES NEAR CAPACITY

PITTSBURGH, May 22—The series of intermittent "wildcat" strikes in Western Pennsylvania's bituminous fields subsided in the main today and production of vitally needed coal and coke, once again approached full capacity.

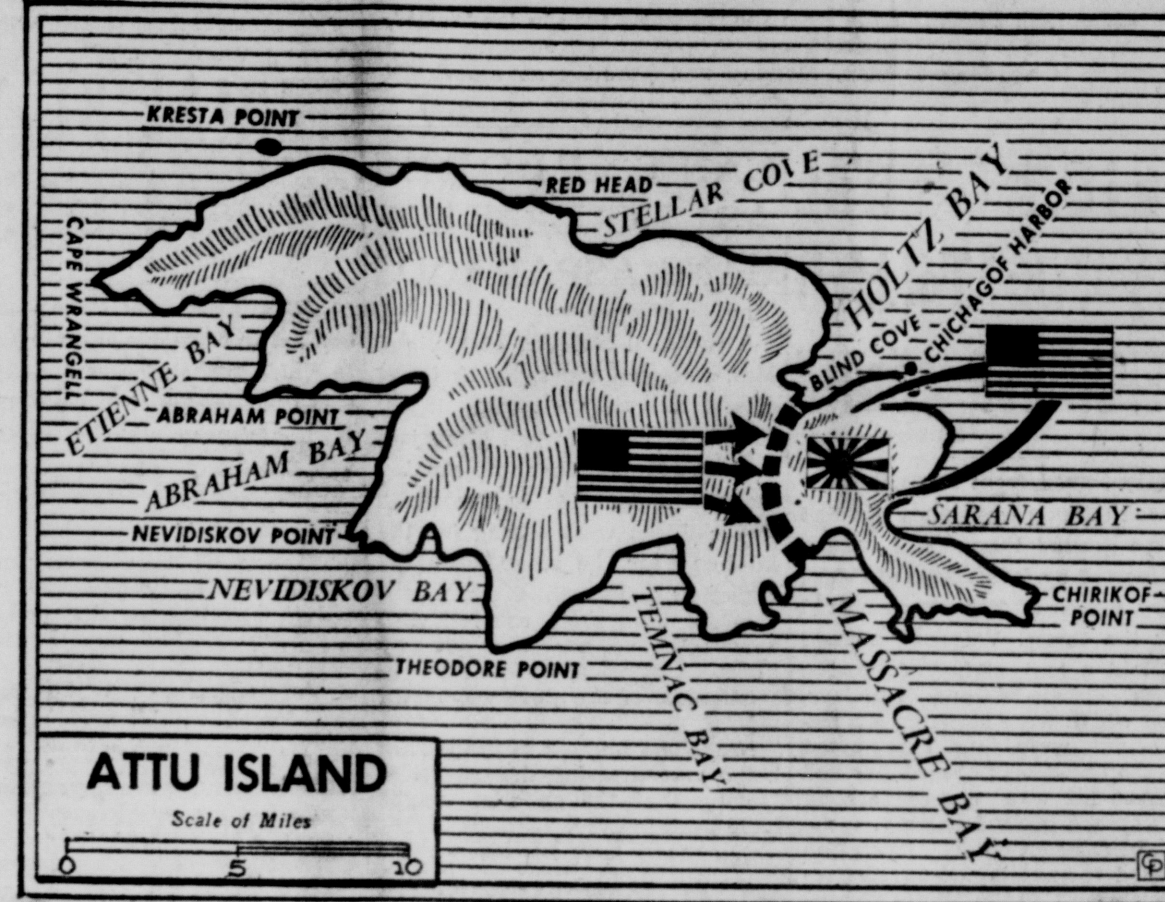

All of the mines which shut down earlier in the week in Cambria county—where the wave of discontent over the prolonged contract negotiations appeared to center—were back in operation with the lone exception of the Twin Rocks operation of the Big Bend Coal Company.

The four mines in the Nanty-Glo area which touched off the work stoppages last Tuesday were pledged to resume operations. United Mine workers locals at the Heisley mine of the Monroe Coal Company, the Cardiff pits of the Imperial coal Company and the No. 1 and 2 shafts of the Springfield Coal Company voted to return to work after hearing appeals from district leaders.

James Mark, president of UMW District No. 2, which embraces central Pennsylvania, predicted that all mines under his jurisdiction would be operating by Monday. Two strikes continue.

The latest flareup in the soft coal fields was attributed to rising dissatisfaction among the miners to delay in formulating a new working contract with the Appalachian region coal operators despite the extension of UMW President John L. Lewis' original 15-day truce to the end of the month.

AERIAL BLITZ OF JAPS LIKELY

Roosevelt And Churchill May Give Order For Drive, Capital Thinks

WASHINGTON, May 22—A powerful aerial offensive against Japan this year, including attacks on Tokyo, today was seen as one of the major decisions likely to emerge from the current strategy conferences between President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

There is a growing belief in diplomatic circles in Washington that air power will be the chief offensive weapon brought to bear against Japan this year.

A land campaign to retake Burma in the Fall is seen as a possibility, but by no means a certainty. The Burma campaign is considered dependent on Summer developments in the European theatre of operations.

If Russia is able to withstand again this Summer a new German offensive, and the United States and Great Britain do not have to undertake a full-scale invasion of the European continent, then it is believed it may be possible to launch a Burma campaign in the late Fall.

However, diplomatic observers believe that the enormous transportation difficulties involved in the Burma campaign will rule it out this year if this country and Britain are compelled to engage in a large scale diversionary move in Europe to relieve pressure on the Soviet armies.

On the other hand, it is thought that the Anglo-American high command is definitely planning large-scale aerial action against vital Japanese points, including those located in the heart of Japan proper.

It is assumed that the American (Continued on Page Two)

INTERNATIONAL DISBANDED BY LEADERS' DECREE

LONDON, May 22—The executive committee of the Communist Internationale has recommended that the Internationale be disbanded, the Moscow radio said today.

The step was decided on by the presidium of the executive committee, said the broadcast announcement, because of its inability "under conditions of world war to call the congress of the Communist Internationale."

The committee at the same time appealed to all supporters to concentrate their efforts against "German Fascism, its allies and vassals."

BRITISH COMB POPULACE FOR DRAFT DODGERS

LONDON, May 22—Hundreds of British civilians today are being held by London police following one of the greatest combined civilian-military check-ups of possible draft dodgers ever held in Great Britain.

Thousands of British policemen augmented by members of the Allied military police joined in the roundup under the direction of Sir Philip Game, commissioner of metropolitan police, and chiefs of the Anglo-American Allied forces in London.

Flying squads of civilian and military police visited thousands of restaurants, dance halls and saloons in a 400 square mile area of London checking on identification cards.

Many special constables and women members of the police force aided in the roundup. Military trucks were used to take scores of suspects to police stations and hundreds are being held pending investigation.

JIM ROOSEVELT SEES JAPAN AS WORST ENEMY

LOS ANGELES, May 22—Lt. Col. James Roosevelt of the U. S. Marines, the President's eldest son, today labelled Japan as "Our No. 1 enemy" from the long-range point of view.

"She is looking at this war, not as something to be determined in the next 25 years, but in the next 500 years," he said.

"The Japanese would not consider defeat in this war as anything more than a reversal or a temporary setback in their war to conquer the world in the next few hundred years."

"The terms of unconditional surrender should apply just as much to Japan, if not more so, than to Europe. If we fail to get complete victory now, the peril of future war will be hanging over our heads and we will have to fight the Japanese generation after generation."

Col. Roosevelt fought the Japs in the Southwest Pacific. Recently back from New Zealand, he is here for treatment of a stomach disorder at the Long Beach naval hospital.

He emphasized that he had confidence in the decisions of the United Nations war strategists and was not trying to tell them what to do, but was merely outlining the situation as he sees it.

WLB PUSHED BY MINE DEADLINE

Board Racing Against Time In Effort To Erase Strike Threat

WASHINGTON, May 22—Racing against time the War Labor Board today took up the report of its three-man panel in the coal controversy which was viewed as leaving the way open to consideration of the demands of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers for a wage increase.

With the extended strike truce expiring nine days from now, the board was expected to meet daily, including Sunday, until a decision is reached, probably by the middle of next week.

The lengthy, factual report of the panel made no recommendations for settlement of the two and a half months' old controversy, but in various instances gave some moral support to Lewis' demands for his 540,000 miners.

Handed down after the panel conducted an investigation of the fight between the UMW and the mine operators, the report pointed out that workmen in manufacturing industry in March received wages 11.2 percent higher than the miners.

Some labor observers believed also that the report left the way open for a compromise adjustment of the Miner Workers' claim for "portal to portal" pay, payment of occupational charges which the report stated were a "holdover" from previous methods of mine operation, and demands to increase vacation pay from the present level of $20 a year to $50 a year.

With the panel not making any specific recommendations, however, the question of whether Lewis will win a $2-a-day-wage boost for the miners was placed squarely on the shoulders of the full board.

Lewis has repeatedly snubbed the WLB, but the three-man panel, in its report, quoted freely the UMW arguments as presented during the New York negotiations. The operators gave their view of the wage dispute in full at the hearings.

SPECIAL TICKETS HANDED OUT TO "FUN" DRIVERS

NEW YORK, May 22—Special "tickets" today are being handed out by Office of Price Administration inspectors to drivers who violate the ban on pleasure driving.

The "tags" which measure 8 1/2 by 14 inches are designated as "notice of hearing" and are being given out to put teeth into the enforcement order. Twenty special hearing officers of the OPA will recommend penalties for those found guilty.

Food Parley Draws Fire Of Solons

Barred Congressmen Say Plan In Making To Control The World

HOT SPRINGS, Ga., May 22—The first international food conference today was threatened with a shutdown by a duet of congressional members.

Either the elected and the professional representatives of the American people are to be admitted to the sacred and heavily-guarded halls of the Homestead hotel or the "conference ought to be called off immediately," said Reps. Smith (R) Ohio and Bradley (R) Michigan.

The congressmen, banned from attending closed conference sessions by Chairman Marvin Jones, gave their former house colleague until today to reply to their ultimatum.

Jones previously had assured Bradley that he and all congressmen were "welcome" to sit in on all executive sessions of this first inter-allied parley on post-war problems.

Action Threatened

The action threatened by congressmen Smith and Bradley begins and ends with the idea that "the American public is convinced that something secret is being done at this conference and they can't be convinced to the contrary except if it be demonstrated by open sessions attended by congress and the press."

A verbal ultimatum went to Judge Jones. And the congressional representatives were still around this morning but "not for health's sake."

The two congressmen announced in the behalf of other house and senate members considering a trip to the sun-baked Virginia mountains that Judge Jones had told them "members of the state department" felt their presence at executive sessions would both embarrass foreign delegates and impositions of Pantelleria.

PRINCESS SPY THRILLS GOTHAM; FBI JUST GRINS

NEW YORK, May 22—A beautiful blonde Russian "princess" with friends high in Nazi officialdom today is on Ellis Island, New York immigration center, innocently unaware of the spy thrill she gave this blase metropolis.

Word sped speedily yesterday that a second "Mata Hari" had been caught by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and was interned at Ellis Island.

It was all very exciting while it lasted but E. E. Conroy, New York FBI chief, dashed cold water on the rumor and it collapsed like a deflated balloon.

Asked whether he knew anything about a Princess Elena, supposed to have been an intimate of Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and a former propaganda broadcaster in Berlin, Conroy admitted that he did.

But, he added, the "princess" wasn't a princess at all. She is Elena Woodford, 30 years old, the FBI chief said. She had been married four times, the last time to an American.

Conroy "explained" that the woman is afflicted with a "constitutional psychopathic inferiority" which probably accounts for the princess part of the story. He said that she once acted in some German movies.

The FBI, he made clear, has no interest in the "princess" because she is definitely not a spy. She came to the U. S. in May of 1938 and was arrested for overstaying her visitor's permit and will be deported.

COAL PRODUCTION UP

WASHINGTON, May 22—Bituminous coal production was 12,250,000 net tons in the week ended May 15, an increase of 8.1 percent over the corresponding week a year ago, the National Coal Association announced today. Production for the year to date was reported as 226,395,000 tons, up 11,325,000 over last year.

Relentless Air Offensive Rages To New Height In Mediterranean

Yanks Mopping-Up On Attu—Russ Hammer At German Armies

BULLETIN WASHINGTON, May 22—The Navy announced today that United States planes "completely destroyed" Japanese-held Attu village and that the battle of Attu island has entered "the final phase." The Navy also said that Lightning fighter bombers had strafed enemy positions in the Chichagof harbor area, setting fire to a fuel depot.

On the same day, Army heavy bombers resumed their aerial offensive against the main Japanese camp area on Kiska island, 200 miles east of Attu.

By International News Service Allied air might was impressed today upon the axis in all main theatres of war.

Berlin got its third straight pummeling from speedy British Mosquito bombers while other squadrons of the Royal Air Force hammered communication lines on the continent and plastered an axis convoy in the English channel.

The continuing, relentless allied aerial offensive in the Mediterranean raged to new heights today with the disclosure that, 86 more enemy planes were destroyed in the last few hours, thus boosting the total three-day tag to 272 axis craft demolished.

The newest victories, which included 19 German and Italian planes shot out of the skies in gruelling aerial battles and an additional 67 destroyed on the ground, were registered during sweeps against targets on Sicily, Sardinia and the axis island bastion of Pantelleria.

Fortresses In Lead

It was the third successive day of the all-out fight for aerial superiority and once again American Flying Fortresses played a leading role in ripping apart enemy airports and grounded planes.

Sardinian landing grounds were chewed to bits with Villa Cidron and Decimomannu especially hard hit. The Sicilian airports at Sciacca and Castel Vetranu were attacked furiously and on Pantelleria, harbor facilities and gun positions were bombed and strafed.

It was the first time the big four-motored American bombers had assaulted the Sciacca drome on the southwest Sicilian coast and photographic reconnaissance later

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan

The prospects of getting a good pay-as-you-go plan now are dimmer than a sailor's sweetheart's parlor.

Pay-as-you-go has been compromised so badly it's in a coma and only a shot of campaign adrenalin in '44 will ever bring it to life as we knew it.

The administration laid down the same terms for Ruml as for Rommel—unconditional surrender.

All the poor man said was "Forgive us for 1942" and they strung him up for it.

The treasury in a fine spirit of optimism has ordered 120 carloads of paper for pay-as-you-go tax forms and still talks of getting started by July 1.

But we still haven't got a plan and if one comes out of the senate-house conference committee it is apt to be a two-headed monster which nobody... least of all Ruml... would want to claim.

No—when and if we get the real thing it will be after '44.

Thought for the day: Pay what you got.

WASHINGTON, May 22—Racing against time the War Labor Board today took up the report of its three-man panel in the coal controversy which was viewed as leaving the way open to consideration of the demands of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers for a wage increase.

With the extended strike truce expiring nine days from now, the board was expected to meet today, including Sunday, until a decision is reached, probably by the middle of next week.

The lengthy, factual report of the panel made no recommendations for settlement of the two and a half months' old controversy, but in various instances gave some moral support to Lewis' demands for his 540,000 miners.

Some labor observers believed also that the report left the way open for a compromise adjustment of the Miner Workers' claim for "portal to portal" pay, payment of occupational charges which the report stated were a "holdover" from previous methods of mine operation, and demands to increase vacation pay from the present level of $20 a year to $50 a year.

With the panel not making any specific recommendations, however, the question of whether Lewis will win a $2-a-day-wage boost for the miners was placed squarely on the shoulders of the full board.

Lewis has repeatedly snubbed the WLB, but the three-man panel, in its report, quoted freely the UMW arguments as presented during the New York negotiations. The operators gave their view of the wage dispute in full at the hearings.

SPECIAL TICKETS HANDED OUT TO "FUN" DRIVERS

NEW YORK, May 22—Special "tickets" today are being handed out by Office of Price Administration inspectors to drivers who violate the ban on pleasure driving.

The "tags" which measure 8 1/2 by 14 inches are designated as "notice of hearing" and are being given out to put teeth into the enforcement order. Twenty special hearing officers of the OPA will recommend penalties for those found guilty.

Food Parley Draws Fire Of Solons

Barred Congressmen Say Plan In Making To Control The World

HOT SPRINGS, Ga., May 22 — The first international food conference today was threatened with a shutdown by a duel of congressional members.

Either the elected and the professional representatives of the American people are to be admitted to the sacred and heavily-guarded halls of the Homestead hotel or the "conference" ought to be called off immediately," said Reps. Smith (R) Ohio and Bradley (R) Michigan.

The congressmen, banned from attending closed conference sessions by Chairman Marvin Jones, gave their former house colleague until today to reply to their ultimatum.

Jones previously had assured Bradley that he and all congressmen were "welcome" to sit in on all executive sessions of this first inter-allied parley on post-war problems.

Action Threatened

The action threatened by congressmen Smith and Bradley begins and ends with the idea that "the American public is convinced that something secret is being done at this conference and they can't be convinced to the contrary except if it be demonstrated by open sessions attended by congress and the press."

A verbal ultimatum went to Judge Jones. And the congressional representatives were still around this morning but "not for health's sake."

The two congressmen announced in the behalf of other house and senate members considering a trip to the sun-baked Virginia mountains that Judge Jones had told them "members of the state department" felt their presence at executive sessions would both embarrass foreign delegates and impede the conference.

PRINCESS SPY THRILLS GOTHAM; FBI JUST GRINS

NEW YORK, May 22—A beautiful blonde Russian "princess" with friends high in Nazi officialdom today is on Ellis island, New York immigration center, innocently unaware of the spy thrill she gave this blase metropolis.

Word sped speedily yesterday that a second "Mata Hari" had been caught by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and was interned at Ellis Island.

It was all very exciting while it lasted but E. E. Conroy, New York FBI chief, dashed cold water on the rumor and it collapsed like a deflated balloon.

Asked whether he knew anything about a Princess Elena, supposed to have been an intimate of Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and a former propaganda broadcaster in Berlin, Conroy admitted that he did.

But, he added, the "princess" wasn't a princess at all. She is Elena Woodford, 30 years old, the FBI chief said. She had been married four times, the last time to an American.

Conroy "explained" that the woman is afflicted with a "constitutional psychopathic inferiority" which probably accounts for the princess part of the story. He said that once she acted in some German movies.

The FBI, he made clear, has no interest in the "princess" because she is definitely not a spy. She came to the U. S. in May of 1938 and was arrested for overstaying her visitor's permit and will be deported.

COAL PRODUCTION UP

WASHINGTON, May 22 — Bituminous coal production was 12,250,000 net tons in the week ended May 15, an increase of 8.1 percent over the corresponding week a year ago, the National Coal Association announced today. Production for the year to date was reported as 226,395,000 tons, up 11,325,000 over last year.

Relentless Air Offensive Rages To New Height In Mediterranean

Yanks Mopping-Up On Attu—Russ Hammer At German Armies

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, May 22—The Navy announced today that United States planes "completely destroyed" Japanese-held Attu village and that the battle of Attu island has entered "the final phase." The Navy also said that Lightning fighter bombers had strafed enemy positions in the Chichagof harbor area, setting fire to a fuel depot.

On the same day, Army heavy bombers resumed their aerial offensive against the main Japanese camp area on Kiska island, 200 miles east of Attu.

By International News Service
Allied air might was impressed today upon the axis in all main theatres of war.

Berlin got its third straight pummeling from speedy British Mosquito bombers while other squadrons of the Royal Air Force hammered communication lines on the continent and plastered an axis convoy in the English channel.

The continuing, relentless allied aerial offensive in the Mediterranean raged to new heights today with the disclosure that 86 more enemy planes were destroyed in the last few hours, thus boosting the total three-day bag to 272 axis craft demolished.

The newest victories, which included 19 German and Italian planes shot out of the skies in grueling aerial battles and an additional 67 destroyed on the ground, were registered during sweeps against targets on Sicily, Sardinia and the axis island bastion of Pantelleria.

Fortresses In Lead

It was the third successive day of the all-out fight for aerial superiority and once again American Flying Fortresses played a leading role in ripping apart enemy airports and grounded planes.

Sardinian landing grounds were chewed to bits with Villa Cidron and Decimomannu especially hard hit. The Sicilian airports at Sciacca and Castel Vetrano were attacked furiously and on Pantelleria, harbor facilities and gun positions were bombed and strafed.

It was the first time the big four-motored American bombers had assaulted the Sciacca drome on the southwest Sicilian coast and photographic reconnaissance later

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan

The prospects of getting a good pay-as-you-go plan now are dimmer than a sailor's sweetheart's parlor.

Pay-as-you-go has been compromised so badly it's in a coma and only a shot of campaign adrenalin in '44 will ever bring it to life as we knew it.

The administration laid down the same terms for Ruml as for Rommel—unconditional surrender.

All the poor man said was "Forgive us for 1942" and they strung him up for it.

The treasury in a fine spirit of optimism has ordered 120 carloads of paper for pay-as-you-go tax forms and still talks of getting started by July 1.

But we still haven't got a plan and if one comes out of the senate-house conference committee it is apt to be a two-headed monster which nobody... least of all Ruml... would want to claim.

No—when and if we get the real thing it will be after '44.

Thought for the day: Pay what you got.

FLOOD THREATS ON INCREASE IN MIDWEST AREA

Total Of 125,000 Homeless Increased By Hour As Danger Mounts

Louis, blanketed thousands of acres and imperiled land throughout its entire lower valley.

Eastern Oklahoma suffered property damage estimated at nearly $30,000,000 and saw more than 5,000 persons made homeless as the Arkansas river covered the entire valley in that area with a muddy sea. Where the Grand and Verdigris rivers pour into the Arkansas at Muskogee, the width was reported from six to eight miles.

Muskogee, the state's third largest city, was forced to ration water to its 32,332 residents in the face of a threatened famine. The city pump station had to be abandoned and less than a 24-hour supply was on hand.

The water was rationed during three periods of an hour each by turning the mains on and off. Throughout the city, merchants sandbagged their buildings. A number of business houses closed to help divert available drinking water into more essential channels.

Vincennes Saved

Historic Vincennes, Ind., given up as doomed by army engineers, was believed saved when the Wabash river slashed two breaks in a levee on the Illinois side. This eased the pressure on the Vincennes dike, but it cut a wide swath through Lawrence county, Ill., threatening to engulf 44,000 acres.

A 99-year-old record was shattered at Peoria, Ill., second largest city in the state, when the Illinois climbed above 26.6 feet, forcing the hurried removal of residents in the lowlands. Highway and rail traffic was cut off for long intervals.

In southwestern Illinois and southeastern Missouri the father of waters showed no signs of subsiding. Evacuation warnings were posted in levee districts of Fort Charities, Stringtown, Ivy Landing and Grand Tower. An estimated 150,000 acres were under water in Missouri and more than 4,000 families were homeless.

The north section of St. Charles, Mo., was imperiled when the Missouri river cut cross country to a new juncture with the Mississippi, sweeping the muddy waters across some 80,000 acres in St. Charles county. Crop and property damage was estimated at upwards of $2,000,000. The Missouri was 10 feet above its flood stage of 25 feet, and still rising.

Army engineers worked hurriedly, and without rest, a long both sides of the Mississippi, fattening levees to withstand the attack expected when the flood crests of the Illinois, Missouri and other tributaries let go new torrents into the big river.

pede the progress of this first United Nations rally.

"Diabolical Thing"

"The so-called food conference at Hot Springs," Smith said bitterly, "is one of the most diabolical things ever perpetrated upon the American people and I have told Judge Jones that."

"There is no question in my mind that this is the grandiose scheme of the planners to plan their super state of control the economy of the world and the lives of the people," Smith told a hastily gathered group of correspondents.

Rep. Smith added that he will demand "an unconditional access to all official conferences being held for press and for congress."

Bradley, who had rushed back to Washington to tell congress that the reception and the peace to come was wonderful, had sulfuric acid in his voice today.

"We were very much stunned," said Bradley, "to have the chairman tell us that we were free to attend all sessions except executive sessions—only to learn later that practically all sessions are executive."

Seek Information

Bradley and Smith declared that it is their duty to "our constituents and country" to learn what goes on at international conferences and to see that "open covenants are openly arrived at." The pace must be set at this first international parley, Bradley stated or the pattern will be established and "unbreakable."

Both congressmen admitted to the correspondents that they had been able "to learn no more than you have—in fact probably less," about what is transpiring beyond the locked doors of the conference.

Electrifying the press which has been watching the conference from a golf course 50 yards from the barricaded Homestead, Jones yanked the keys to executive sessions out of congressional hands and left the legislators just a notch or two above correspondents.

The harried Jones, who has a hydra-headed job of presiding over the conference, chairmanning the U. S. delegation and enforcing the rules, explained:

"It might be embarrassing to people of other countries if they (the congressmen) went to executive sessions. These meetings should be executive where the delegates feel completely free to exchange their views."

REICH CAPITAL HIT FOR THIRD STRAIGHT NIGHT

showed 67 axis warplanes in ruins on the ground there.

Escorted by formations of P-38s, heavy waves of Fortresses roared over the Castel Vetrano airfield and laid a long string of bombs across buildings and runways, along which were standing a number of axis warplanes. Three giant ME-323 transports caught fire and a direct hit was scored among guns of one ground battery.

The moment the formation wheeled toward home, 25 Messerschmitts and Focke Wulfs swooped down out of the sun and in fierce dogfights lasting for many miles seven axis planes were shot down. The German fighters tried hard to shatter the Fortress formations by dropping bombs among them from above, but without success.

The raid on Sicca caught the enemy by surprise and the mission was completed even before the anti-craft guns could get into action. No axis fighters put in an appearance and the bombers were able to assail the target without effective interference.

The big B-17's effectively blasted ground installations and spread devastation among parked enemy planes.

As soon as the B-25 Mitchell bombers reached their objectives at the Villa Cidra airfield, some 20 enemy fighters swooped down on them and in the ensuing dogfights on American bomber gunners blew apart an attacking Messerschmitt and an escorting Lightning pilot knocked down three in quick succession.

An hour later, a second formation of B-25's hit Villa Cidra again and another violent air battle developed. The bombers shot down one enemy fighter, while their P-38 escorts got four more. Two of the American bombers were lost in this attack.

Japan was meted out severe new doses of Allied explosives when Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen struck principal island bases held by Nippon north of Australia.

Russia combined smashing artillery barrages with aerial assaults to hammer concentrations of German troops and supplies to hamper any preparations Hitler may be making for a new onslaught in that theatre.

The raid on Berlin in the growing Allied aerial offensive against the continent in what is now officially termed the battle of Germany was the sixth in nine nights. The forays over Europe marked the 10th consecutive night of RAF activity.

Two Axis ships were sunk and a third damaged in the attack by Whirlwind bombers on the enemy convoy. Mines also were laid in enemy waters.

Principal targets of attack, besides the sortie against Berlin, were Nazi-controlled railways in France. Two trains were set aflame and were believed completely destroyed.

London had a new air alert during the night but the lone Nazi raider which succeeded in penetrating to the vicinity of the British capital was driven off successfully and no incidents were reported. Nazi airmen were reported active over the southeast coast.

The Jap airdromes of Vunakana and Rapopo, New Britain, bore the brunt of forays by MacArthur's fliers, while Gasmata on the island's south coast and the Cape Gloucester airdrome also were hammered.

Numerous points were hit by Allied airmen in New Guinea and 13 Nipponese landing barges were destroyed or damaged in water just off-shore.

In bitter air combat with Jap fighters, now putting up increased opposition, the Allies accounted for 18 enemy craft destroyed or probably destroyed.

Nippon was punished further by heavy British raids against important military points in Burma.

CAN EXPLODES AS HOUSEWIFE CANS ASPARAGUS

Two small children of Mr. and Mrs. George Barnes, South Court street, narrowly escaped injury Friday afternoon when glass jars in which Mrs. Barnes was canning asparagus exploded in the stove. The children were sitting in the kitchen near the stove when the explosion happened.

While both were covered with asparagus, neither was hit by glass.

The door of the stove was blown off.

Neighbors hurried to the Barnes home after hearing the explosion, fearing that the children might have been injured.

secondary in importance to immediate resumption of work.

The board, which acted swiftly to check the strikes, served notice that it "intends to see that both sides keep their promise."

Internal labor trouble flared when Leo Lamotte, director of the UAW-CIO Chrysler division, accused his fellow-unionist, Walter Reuther, UAW vice-president, of kindling strike trouble to advance his own political ambitions.

Some On Sit-Down

Silent on the subject, Reuther said Lamotte's conduct would be settled through the channels of the international union.

At the Ford plant, 21 members of the Highland park bargaining committee of Local No. 400, UAW-CIO, were conducting a sitdown in the offices of the labor relations division.

Ben Garrison, president of Local 400, said the action was "a last attempt to avert threatened work stoppages by a disgruntled membership whose grievances have gone unsettled for some time."

Six hundred workers of the Holley Carburetor Co. walked out last night in an hour-and-a-half strike flareup over discontinuance of a "high cost of living" clause in their UAW-CIO contract. Officials said other shifts were not affected.

Two other UAW-CIO strikes ended yesterday when workers at the Kelsey-Hayes wheel, and the Ray Day Piston Corp., returned to work.

Mr. Kochheiser said that the store's name will be changed, but not at the present time.

KENTUCKIAN STRUCK BY TRAIN, INQUIRY SHOWS

Ralph Worthington, 32, of Greenup, Ky., a Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, was hurt by a train and was not a victim of foul play Thursday night, Police Chief W. F. McCrady declared Saturday after completing an investigation into the Worthington case.

The chief said that from all indications Worthington had been intoxicated and sat down on the C. & O. tracks or was walking along the right-of-way when he was hit by a southbound train.

The railroad was found walking in Route 22 at the C. & O. overhead early Friday.

Worthington remains in fair condition in Berger hospital. His injuries include a broken right collarbone, broken left arm, broken ribs which are torn loose from his spine, and numerous bruises and lacerations.

Chief McCrady said he and other members of the force had checked Worthington's activities earlier in the night he was hurt and found that he had been drinking.

WILBUR BRINKER HEADS REBER HILL MEMORIAL

Wilbur Brinker, Walnut township, was elected president of the Reber Hill Memorial association Friday night at a meeting held at the cemetery offices. Other officers named were Alva D. May, secretary, and Charles Trone, treasurer.

Memorial Day services at Reber Hill cemetery will be held Sunday afternoon, May 30, at 1:30 p. m., with Reber Huston of Columbus as the speaker. Mr. Huston, a native of the Harrison township community, was in World War I. Persons in the neighborhood who have flowers are urged to take them to the cemetery to help decorate for the annual event.

MEMORIAL SERVICES SET AT DARBYVILLE

Memorial services at Darbyville will be conducted next Sunday, May 30, at 2 p. m., slow time, with Henry Page Folsom, Jr., post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, planning the event. The services will be held in the Methodist church in Darbyville.

All Muhlenberg township boys in service will be honored by name, and it is asked that all relatives of the youths be present to participate in services.

LITTLE LOCAL DAMAGE DONE BY HIGH WATER

Henry T. McCrady, county engineer, said Saturday that only damage done in Pickaway county by the rise of small streams this week after heavy rains was on County Road 2 at Moccasin creek where an abutment on Bridge No. 12 was partially washed out.

All streams were high for several days, but all are now back in bank and nearly normal.

The Scioto river continues to fall after flood waters reached lowland areas threatening some damage.

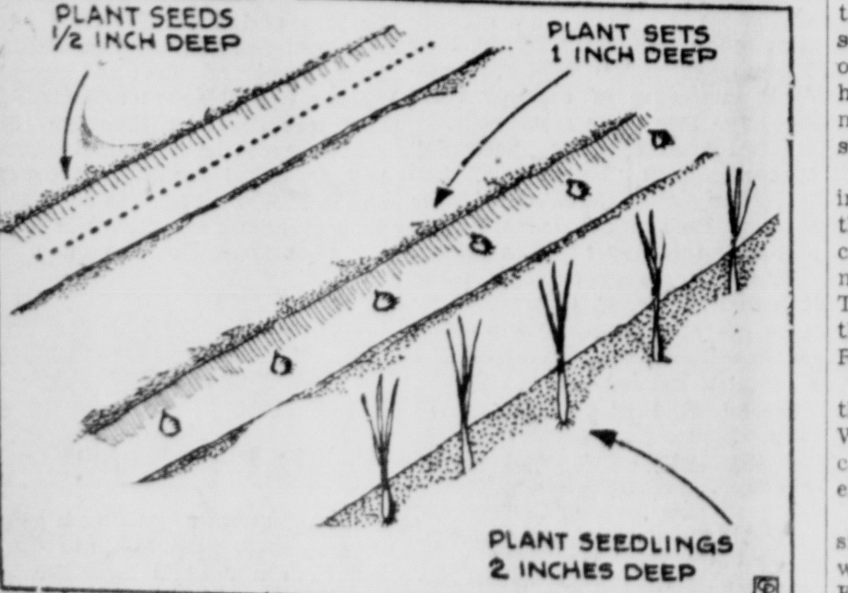

ENOUGH CARS AVAILABLE FOR LOCKBOURNE TRIP

Plenty of automobiles are available for the visit of the high school band and the Kiwanets to the Lockbourne air base scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

Robert Colville, who is arranging transportation, said that more than enough persons had volunteered use of their automobiles to haul the musicians to the base.

The cars will leave the courthouse at 11:30 a. m., Sunday, the concert being scheduled at 2 o'clock Eastern War Time.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Onions Are Space Savers in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

THERE ARE so many varieties of onions that it is possible to have an early, a medium and a late crop in the Victory garden. There are also white, yellow and red varieties of onions available. Onions are also recommended for the Victory garden because they do not take up much space.

Onions are grown from seeds, sets and transplants, also called seedlings. Onions require a fine, fertile soil which is well drained. They must be kept free from the encroachment of weeds by frequent but shallow cultivation. The weeds between the plants should be pulled by hand.

Unless onion seeds are planted out early in April in northerly latitudes it is advisable to grow onions from sets or transplants. Seeds should be planted out as early as the soil can be worked. They are planted in drills 1/2 inch deep, and three to four seeds per inch, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The drills are usually from 12 to 18 inches apart, depending upon the type of cultivator used. The young plants are thinned to stand three to four inches apart. The first thinning may be used as green onions for the table and the second thinning can be boiled.

Onion sets are planted three to four inches apart, as illustrated, then covered with one inch of soil. The sets will mature earlier than plants grown from seed.

In the early spring your onion plants can be purchased from seed stores. In replanting, as illustrated, they are set four inches apart and two inches deep in the soil.

NEW LICENSES NEEDED

Circleville and Pickaway county cigaret dealers were given notice Saturday by Auditor Forrest Short that they are not permitted to sell cigarets next Monday without 1943-44 licenses. ROCHESTER seems to be giving Jack Benny a bit of advice in this scene with Priscilla Lane from the "Meanest Man in the World", which, coupled with "Desert Victory", picture of North African fighting, is showing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Grand theatre.

LUM and Abner appear Sunday in "Bashful Bachelor", at the Circle theatre. Also shown will be William Boyd in "Border Patrol".

REICH CAPITAL HIT FOR THIRD STRAIGHT NIGHT

showed 67 axis warplanes in ruins on the ground there.

Escorted by formations of P-38s, heavy waves of Fortresses roared over the Castel Vetrano airfield and laid a long string of bombs across buildings and runways, along which were standing a number of axis warplanes. Three giant ME-323 transports caught fire and a direct hit was scored among guns of one ground battery.

The moment the formation wheeled toward home, 25 Messerschmitts and Focke Wulfs swooped down out of the sun and in fierce dogfights lasting for many miles seven axis planes were shot down. The German fighters tried hard to shatter the Fortress formations by dropping bombs among them from above, but without success.

The raid on Sciacca caught the enemy by surprise and the mission was completed even before the anti-craft guns could get into action. No axis fighters put in an appearance and the bombers were able to assail the target without effective interference.

The big B-17's effectively blasted ground installations and spread devastation among parked enemy planes.

As soon as the B-25 Mitchell bombers reached their objectives at the Villa Cidra airfield, some 20 enemy fighters swooped down on them and in the ensuing dog-fights on American bomber gunner blew apart an attacking Messerschmitt and an escorting Lightning pilot knocked down three in quick succession.

An hour later, a second formation of B-25's hit Villa Cidra again and another violent air battle developed. The bombers shot down one enemy fighter, while their P-38 escorts got four more. Two of the American bombers were lost in this attack.

Japan was meted out severe new doses of Allied explosives when Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen struck principal island bases held by Nippon north of Australia.

Russia combined smashing artillery barrages with aerial assaults to hammer concentrations of German troops and supplies to hamper any preparations Hitler may be making for a new onslaught in that theatre.

The raid on Berlin in the growing Allied aerial offensive against the continent in what is now officially termed the battle of Germany was the sixth in nine nights. The forays over Europe marked the 10th consecutive night of RAF activity.

Two Axis ships were sunk and a third damaged in the attack by Whirlwind bombers on the enemy convoy. Mines also were laid in enemy waters.

Principal targets of attack, besides the sortie against Berlin, were Nazi-controlled railways in France. Two trains were set aflame and were believed completely destroyed.

London had a new air alert during the night but the lone Nazi raider which succeeded in penetrating to the vicinity of the British capital was driven off successfully and no incidents were reported. Nazi airmen were reported active over the southeast coast.

The Jap airdromes of Vunakana and Rapopo, New Britain, bore the brunt of forays by MacArthur's fliers, while Gasmata on the island's south coast and the Cape Gloucester airdrome also were hammered.

Numerous points were hit by Allied airmen in New Guinea and 13 Nipponese landing barges were destroyed or damaged in water just off-shore.

In bitter air combat with Jap fighters, now putting up increased opposition, the Allies accounted for 18 enemy craft destroyed or probably destroyed.

Nippon was punished further by heavy British raids against important military points in Burma.

While both were covered with asparagus, neither was hit by glass.

The door of the stove was blown off.

Neighbors hurried to the Barnes home after hearing the explosion, fearing that the children might have been injured.

KENTUCKIAN STRUCK BY TRAIN, INQUIRY SHOWS

Ralph Worthington, 32, of Greenup, Ky., a Chesapeake and Ohio railroader, was hurt by a train and was not a victim of foul play Thursday night, Police Chief W. F. McCrady declared Saturday after completing an investigation into the Worthington case.

The chief said that from all indications Worthington had been intoxicated and sat down on the C. & O. tracks or was walking along the right-of-way when he was hit by a southbound train.

The railroader was found walking in Route 22 at the C. & O. overhead early Friday.

Worthington remains in fair condition in Berger hospital. His injuries include a broken right collarbone, broken left arm, broken ribs which are torn loose from his spine, and numerous bruises and lacerations.

Chief McCrady said he and other members of the force had checked Worthington's activities earlier in the night he was hurt and found that he had been drinking.

Children said Potts first placed the body in the coal bin on April 4, then two weeks later dug a shallow grave in the basement floor for it.

Potts continued to live in the bungalow until jailed Thursday night after the grave was opened. Police said a former employer of Mrs. Potts, who worked as a domestic in the homes of Denver socialites, tried to locate her. Unable to reach Mrs. Potts by phone, the woman, Mrs. Robert Russell visited neighbors and learned their suspicions. Potts had explained his wife's absence as a "visit to California." Mrs. Russell communicated her suspicions to police.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Onions Are Space Savers in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

THERE ARE so many varieties of onions that it is possible to have an early, a medium and a late crop in the Victory garden. There are also white, yellow and red varieties of onions available. Onions are also recommended for the Victory garden because they do not take up much space.

Onions are grown from seeds, sets and transplants, also called seedlings. Onions require a fine, fertile soil which is well drained. They must be kept free from the encroachment of weeds by frequent but shallow cultivation. The weeds between the plants should be pulled by hand.

Unless onion seeds are planted out early in April in northerly latitudes it is advisable to grow onions from sets or transplants. Seeds should be planted out as

A CONTINENT REDEEMED

ONE of the striking points made by Winston Churchill in his speech of May 19 was that of one clear continent. Americans have been apt to think of the North African victory as merely the clearing out of a thin strip of land. Although it had great importance in making shipping through the Mediterranean possible, shortening the lines to the Middle and Far East, in their minds it remained a narrow shore.

Churchill reminded his audience that with the British holding the island of Madagascar off the eastern coast, and British, French and Americans holding the area through to Dakar, the whole continent of Africa was now in the hands of the United Nations.

The Americans, North and South, barring some strong fifth columns in the Argentine and a few Jap strongholds, now beginning to weaken, in the Aleutians, are firmly held by the Allies. That makes three. Australia is the fourth.

Europe and Asia remain to be freed. But all the peoples under invaders are restless, miserable, plotting against their conquerors. When the liberating armies once get inside the outer defenses, they will find themselves helped by the populations in those countries.

The war is far from won. Many more good men must die, many more good ships be sunk, before freedom is securely won. But much has already been accomplished.

PLAY BALL!

WAR workers are demanding that some professional baseball games be played in the morning. Heretofore that has ordinarily been done only on Decoration Day, the Fourth of July and Labor Day, and not always then. The morning attendance has usually been so much smaller than the afternoon that the growing tendency has been to play both games after lunch, like ordinary double-headers.

The hours of war workers are expected to make a difference. Many are on the job from 3 to 11 p. m., and would enjoy seeing a game before lunch. As baseball's financial future is uncertain, the owners tend to grasp at any possible action that might bring in more money.

Whether morning, afternoon or evening, the game should stick to the record in which it surpasses other human activities. It is almost the only one to begin when it says it will.

The news from Burma still fails to report the whereabouts of that girl who used to sit by the old Moulin pagoda, lookin' eastward to the sea.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up at the usual hour and wondering how many folk in the United States rushed out and bought war bonds after looking at that picture of Yamamoto, the Jap admiral who at the beginning of the war declared that he would dictate peace terms at the White House. But the Yanks caught up with him and now he is no more. For which thank the Lord. Always wondered what a hog-head looks like and now I know. Imagine a thing like that dictating to us. Just on the off chance that it is possible the scrivener vowed to do even more to aid the war effort.

Noted Clarence Helvering's crew making street repairs, some of them at spots where the streets had been torn up and temporarily repaired by the utilities. Seems to me that the city should be saved this expense, which amounts to a lot of dollars in a year's time. The utilities should be required to repair diggings and keep them in repair until such time as they become a permanent part of the street the same as before being disturbed.

From Captain Drum, somewhere in the Pacific, came a V-mail letter, and never a more unusual one. All drawing. A penned sketch of the island belle as Hollywood sees her, and below, under the caption "But We've Got Ringside Seats", the native women as they really are. Nothing to interest anyone, those gals.

Shocked by the death of John Walters, for I had talked with him only a few hours before and he had said he was feeling better than at any time since he suffered a stroke more than a year ago. Voiced pleasure that he was not incapacitated and said he expected full recovery. Now, he is gone. Makes one think.

Chatted with Bob Smith who was delighted by the halt in rise of Scioto, being ready for a lot of farming in the bottomlands. Hopes this will be the last flood threat of the year. Heard of many along the river spearing carp and did see one boy with a pair of which he was mighty proud. Bish Given kicked out a couple and at his gas station

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

OFFICER SAVING NAVY'S FACE

WASHINGTON — This column recently revealed how the Navy had publicly taken credit for using helicopters as a new weapon against submarines, when as a matter of fact the Navy did not have even one helicopter in its possession and had opposed the Maritime Commission and the Coast Guard in their campaign to use helicopters.

Last month, Secretary Knox issued another piece of Navy ballyhoo which made interesting reading, but which had absolutely nothing to do with the Navy. He announced the good news that a number of airplane carriers converted from merchant vessels were being launched, and that many more would be launched soon.

However, the amazing truth is that the Navy did not even know these particular airplane carriers were being constructed. Shortly before the Knox ballyhoo, forthright Rear Admiral "Jerry" Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, together with far-sighted Rear Admiral Howard Vickery, his construction commissioner, were conferring with Vice Admiral Fred Horne, right hand man to Secretary Knox and in charge of Naval Operations. Vice Admiral Horne was asking the Maritime Commission to turn over some of its shipyards for the construction of escort vessels.

"We're already building (number censored) airplane carriers for you now," replied Chairman Land.

"What airplane carriers?" replied Horne. "I thought you were building some transports."

"No," replied Land, "we're building flat-tops. They carry planes."

"When will they be finished?" asked Vice Admiral Horne.

"This year," replied Land.

The Navy was so delighted that five days before Secretary Knox made his announcement of the new airplane carriers, his Admirals sent over to the Henry Kaiser office, which was building the carriers, and offered to take over the whole program. This the Maritime Commission refused. They had started the program, and proposed finishing it.

SECRET SHIPS

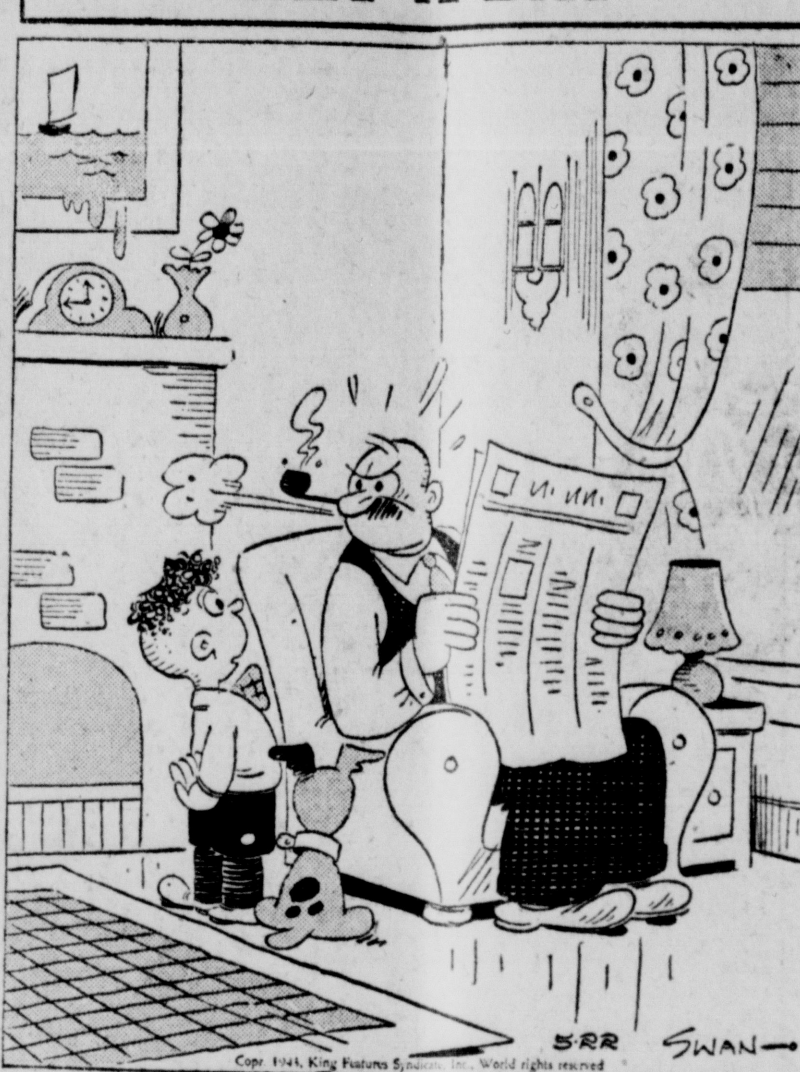

Here is the inside story of how the thing happened. Unfortunately it indicates that the Navy is sadly lacking in far-sighted executives who plan ahead.

The man who put across these converted airplane carriers is Howard Vickery, once virtually kicked out of the Navy. Vickery was a lowly commander, had been passed over three times for promotion, was about to be "broken," when the President went over the Admirals' heads and put him on the Maritime Commission. Vickery is a Republican, son of an Ohio judge who has opposed Roosevelt. But the President recognized his ability, later made him an admiral, despite the Navy.

Back in 1939 Vickery saw war coming, saw the importance of airplane carriers, got a secret order in writing from the President to build passenger vessels for the Pacific which could be converted into airplane carriers. They were to have smokestacks which could be pushed to

Baldness Believed To Be Hereditary

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I HAVE had a number of letters recently from people who want to know the cause and prevention of baldness. If I knew this, I probably wouldn't be writing newspaper articles, but would be living in luxury on the fruits of my knowledge, surrounded by flunkies who were waiting on me hand and foot.

It must be evident to anyone who goes around his fellow creatures that nobody knows the cause and cure of baldness. Sit in the back row of a movie theater, notice the reflection of the light on the bald domes and mark the neat tresses below the line where the hair stops. If there were a good treatment, you would not see them.

The best bet is that baldness is hereditary. The hair is extremely sensitive to hereditary influences. Identical twins have hair that swirls, one in one direction and the other in the opposite. Naturally curly hair curls with remarkable similarity to that of the father or mother of the possessor. The number of waves and the position of the waves is exactly the same. The hereditary nature of hair growth is shown in all of the lower animals.

Dogs of one species have, generation after generation, the same hair color and distribution. So it is very likely that baldness is hereditary. This is no comfort to anybody who has it, however, because by the time he begins to get bald, there is nothing he can do about his father or grandfather.

No Help for Baldness

The hair roots are little cellular structures and in a person who is doomed to get bald, they begin to atrophy at about the age of 28. Nobody who goes through the experience of having his hair come out in wads can ever believe that people begin to get bald at the age of 28, but they do just the same and nothing can stop the inevitable progress.

All the perfumes of Araby, all the lights, all the electric heaters, all the massages, all the gadgets, all the shampoos, all the vitamins and all the endocrines in the world can be advocated, but it will be in vain. Philosophy and resignation are the only treatments that are worthwhile.

I am referring now to a common form of baldness. There is a condition called alopecia areata, in which bald spots occur. It may affect individuals at any age and can be successfully treated.

The care of healthy hair is not a matter of very much moment. Those who give a great deal of time and thought to their hair probably overeat it, rather than underfeed it. The simplest forms of soap and warm water are the best for washing the hair, and thorough washing should not be done more than once a week.

Wetting Hair Harmless

Advice against wetting the hair daily is quackery. I know a dozen people—one of them being myself—who have immersed their hair in water two or three times a day for many years and who still have a good, heavy crop of hair.

Dandruff is a form of seborrheic dermatitis. For cleansing—benzine, followed by sweet oil or olive oil. Soap and water are to be avoided except once a week when on Saturday night an ointment containing salicylic acid, 1 part, ammoniated mercury, 2 parts and ointment, 30 parts, is rubbed in, left all night and worked out with warm water and green soap the following morning.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. B.: Will you please give me information on shingles? What is its cause and is it contagious?

Answer: Shingles is an affection of the nervous system, usually affecting those nerves that go around the skin of the chest or trunk and causing a very painful skin eruption in the form of a blister. The cause is unknown, but it is not contagious.

T. Y.:—What is fluid in the tissue and from what may it develop? What is digitalis and what is it given for and will it reduce weight?

Answer: Fluid in the tissues comes from a heart weakness in most cases and in such cases digitalis is a great benefit because it strengthens the heart and thus removes fluid from the tissues. In this way digitalis "reduces weight."

YESTERDAY: Jean gives first aid to Steve and to the trainmen injured in the wreck.

CHAPTER EIGHT

WHEN LANDIS arrived at the plant the following morning, Jean was already at her desk, looking fresh and lovely in a frosty-blue silk suit.

"You've evidently recovered from our little adventure last night," he greeted her.

"I slept like a lamb," she answered. "This morning I had almost convinced myself we were at a western movie last night until you walked in with your arm in that sling. How's the wrist?"

"Painful," admitted Steve, "but mending. Your other patients are better this morning, too. When you retire as a secretary I'll hire you for my nurse."

"You'll need one if you keep jumping on strange cars," retorted Jean. She gathered up the opened mail and followed him into his office. "Did the chief of police arrive all right?"

"He did, also the mayor domo. And the mayor domo's wife, who was greatly disappointed you still weren't there and determined that we should go and get you. I thought the chief was going to humor her for a while, but finally the mayor backed me, and admitted his wife was just curious to see you because she had heard you wore Paris models."

Jean laughed as she pulled a window blind to the glare of the morning sun from his desk. "Who knows, I may make society here yet. Did the trainmen know anything more?"

"Not enough," Steve started through his mail. "The chief of police is coming around this morning. He will undoubtedly repeat the whole scene point by point, so I'll let you hear his more picturesque account."

But the chief of police could not come in till afternoon. Steve said Jean worked steadily, deliberately pushing the robbery back in their minds to concentrate on the rush of factory matters. Scores of urgent details demanded Steve's consideration. There were many adjustments necessary before the hiring of the scores of workers could begin, and Steve was determined to make them in as short a time as possible so that the actual work of rubber manufacture could get under way.

Twice wires came from the company headquarters concerning the robbery. As Steve dictated replies, Jean had all she could do to keep from showing her curiosity, from drifting off into day dreaming and surmising about the exciting affair.

At 4 o'clock, when she saw the pompous, elaborately uniformed little chief of police enter her office, she could have kissed him. She took him in to Steve's office, where Steve introduced him gravely.

"Miss Marsden, Chief Manzanara." The chief elicited his heels and bowed from his protruding waist. "It is the greatest pleasure," he murmured. Gallantly he rushed to hold a chair for her. "If I may have the honor of asking you the few questions?" he proposed.

"Of course," Jean said eagerly. The sharp gleaming little eyes of the official gazed into thoughtful space as he sat down in another chair near Steve's desk. He pulled down the medal-weighted coat of his uniform with a neat proud flourish and patted his heavy revolver holster.

"As I see the crime," he said, clearing his voice loudly and turning to Jean appreciatively toward Steve, "from your most concise report and the few remarks of the two trainmen, the despicable bandits derailed the train, and were waiting to board it as soon as it had been wrecked. They found the second trainman in the baggage car, ruthlessly set upon him, and then escaped with the mail bag before the engineer could recover from his unconscious state after he had been hurled from the overturned engine."

Steve returned his courteous nod. "That is a very adequate description of the scene," his bland gaze paused momentarily on Jean's face. She gave him a slight, amused nod. She was getting a vivid description as he had promised.

"Then you and Miss Marsden approached in your car—a station wagon, was it not?" continued Manzanara.

Steve nodded. His humor was now slightly tinged with impatience. "The desperadoes had not anticipated this event. They ran for their car. Although you turned the glare of your spotlight upon them, the distance was too great for you to be sure of later identifying them." He turned to Jean. "Could YOU remember them again, senorita?" he asked politely.

"I've been trying to think all day," Jean pondered. "One was taller than the other two. I'm sure—the first one who stopped when he saw us. I believe they were all dark-haired."

"A fact," smiled the chief gently, "of small significance in Mexico."

"Oh—and one of them limped when he ran?"

"Limped?" Both men regarded her with renewed interest. Steve frowned thoughtfully. "Come to think of it, I believe one did," he admitted. "I was so busy dodging bullets, it had slipped my mind."

"You see, you cannot surpass the feminine eye for detail!" The chief triumphantly whipped a small ornate leather book from his pocket and jotted this down.

"Of course," Steve said thoughtfully, "he might have temporarily hurt his ankle in jumping from the baggage car. Or one of my shots may have got him in the leg."

"No, he was limping before you shot, I think," Jean said.

"Mr. Landis says the car was an old Buick." The chief of police was regarding her now with hopeful confidence. "Do you agree with him?"

Jean laughed and shrugged. "I've never been able to recognize a car unless it was my own."

The chief studied his book and sighed gently. "You are living at the hotel in the village—in case I would wish to question you further?" Jean nodded, and rose. As she left, she could hear the chief telling Steve of the painstaking and elaborate search his department was making to apprehend the vicious criminals—of the government co-operation they were getting. She saw Steve bringing out his code wire from the company headquarters. They would undoubtedly hold a lengthy conference.

Her phone was ringing when she entered her own office. She lifted the receiver as she sat down at her desk.

"Mr. Landis' office." Mrs. Parkinson's rich voice came through refreshingly. "I want to ask a favor, darling. Please don't say no."

Jean gave a small, surprised laugh. "That would be ungrateful of me, after that wonderful afternoon at your rancho yesterday?"

"Nonsense, my dear," cried Mrs. Parkinson. "Yesterday was our pleasure. And it's only because I'm greedy that I'm wondering if you could come out and keep me company for three days. I'll be lonely because Curley is flying Mr. Parkinson to Mexico City on a business trip."

"Oh! Grand!" Jean realized her voice betrayed her pleasure—and her hesitation.

"Now, don't consider it please, if it would make trouble with your boss," Mrs. Parkinson said hastily. "For one quick moment Jean saw herself going home for three nights to the spacious, cool rooms and exquisite food at the Rancho Cahoyá instead of the hot, tiny cubicle at the hotel. 'I'm sure he won't mind—for three nights,' she cried impulsively.

"Wonderful! We'll expect you for dinner."

Jean replaced the receiver thoughtfully, and a little anxiously. Had her craving for luxury betrayed her? Would Steve be annoyed by her decision to return to the rancho?

A CONTINENT REDEEMED

ONE of the striking points made by Winston Churchill in his speech of May 19 was that of one clear continent. Americans have been apt to think of the North African victory as merely the clearing out of a thin strip of land. Although it had great importance in making shipping through the Mediterranean possible, shortening the lines to the Middle and Far East, in their minds it remained a narrow shore.

Churchill reminded his audience that with the British holding the island of Madagascar off the eastern coast, and British, French and Americans holding the area through to Dakar, the whole continent of Africa was now in the hands of the United Nations.

The Americans, North and South, barring some strong fifth columns in the Argentine and a few Jap strongholds, now beginning to weaken, in the Aleutians, are firmly held by the Allies. That makes three. Australia is the fourth.

Europe and Asia remain to be freed. But all the peoples under invaders are restless, miserable, plotting against their conquerors. When the liberating armies once get inside the outer defenses, they will find themselves helped by the populations in those countries.

The war is far from won. Many more good men must die, many more good ships be sunk, before freedom is securely won. But much has already been accomplished.

PLAY BALL!

WAR workers are demanding that some professional baseball games be played in the morning. Heretofore that has ordinarily been done only on Decoration Day, the Fourth of July and Labor Day, and not always then. The morning attendance has usually been so much smaller than the afternoon that the growing tendency has been to play both games after lunch, like ordinary double-headers.

The hours of war workers are expected to make a difference. Many are on the job from 3 to 11 p. m., and would enjoy seeing a game before lunch. As baseball's financial future is uncertain, the owners tend to grasp at any possible action that might bring in more money.

Whether morning, afternoon or evening, the game should stick to the record in which it surpasses other human activities. It is almost the only one to begin when it says it will.

OFFICER SAVING NAVY'S FACE

WASHINGTON — This column recently revealed how the Navy had publicly taken credit for using helicopters as a new weapon against submarines, when as a matter of actual fact the Navy did not have even one helicopter in its possession and had opposed the Maritime Commission and the Coast Guard in their campaign to use helicopters.

Last month, Secretary Knox issued another piece of Navy ballyhoo which made interesting reading, but which had absolutely nothing to do with the Navy. He announced the good news that a number of airplane carriers converted from merchant vessels were being launched, and that many more would be launched soon.

However, the amazing truth is that the Navy did not even know these particular airplane carriers were being constructed.

Shortly before the Knox ballyhoo, forthright Rear Admiral "Jerry" Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, together with far-sighted Rear Admiral Howard Vickery, his construction commissioner, were conferring with Vice Admiral Fred Horne, right hand man to Secretary Knox and in charge of Naval Operations. Vice Admiral Horne was asking the Maritime Commission to turn over some of its shipyards for the construction of escort vessels.

"We're already building (number censored) airplane carriers for you now," replied Chairman Land.

"What airplane carriers?" replied Horne. "I thought you were building some transports."

"No," replied Land, "we're building flat-tops. They carry planes."

"When will they be finished?" asked Vice Admiral Horne.

"This year," replied Land.

The Navy was so delighted that five days before Secretary Knox made his announcement of the new airplane carriers, his Admirals sent over to the Henry Kaiser office, which was building the carriers, and offered to take over the whole program. "Miss Marauden, Chief Manzanara. The chief clicked his heels and bowed from his protruding waist.

"It was the greatest pleasure," he murmured. Gallantly he rushed to hold a chair for her. "If I may have the honor of asking you the few questions?" he proposed.

"Of course," Jean said eagerly. The sharp gleaming little eyes of the official gazed into thoughtful space as he sat down in another chair near Steve's desk. He pulled down the medal-weighted coat of his uniform with a neat proud flourish and patted his heavy revolver holster.

"As I see the crime," he said, clearing his voice loudly and turning to beam appreciatively toward Steve, "from your most concise report, and the few remarks of the two trainmen, the despicable bandits derailed the train, and were waiting to board it as soon as it had been wrecked. They found the second trainman in the baggage car, ruthlessly set upon him, and then escaped with the mail bag before the engineer could recover from his unconscious state after he had been hurled from the overturned engine."

Steve returned his courteous nod. "That is a very adequate description of the scene," his bland gaze paused momentarily on Jean's face. She gave him a slight, amused nod. She was getting a vivid description as he had promised.

"Then you and Miss Marauden approached in your car—a station wagon, was it not?" continued Manzanara.

Steve nodded. His humor was now slightly tinged with impatience.

"The desperados had not anticipated this event. They ran for their car. Although you turned the glare of your spotlight upon them, the distance was too great for you to be sure of later identifying them."

He turned to Jean. "Could YOU remember them again, señorita?" he asked politely.

"I've been trying to think all day," Jean pondered. "One was taller than the other two. I'm sure—the first one who stopped when he saw us. I believe they were all dark-haired."

"A fact," smiled the chief gently, "of small significance in Mexico."

"Oh—and one of them limped when he ran?"

"Limped?" Both men regarded her with renewed interest. Steve frowned thoughtfully. "Come to think of it, I believe one did," he admitted. "I was so busy dodging bullets, it had slipped my mind."

"You see, you cannot surpass the feminine eye for detail!" The chief triumphantly whipped a small ornate leather book from his pocket and jotted this down.

"Of course," Steve said thoughtfully, "he might have temporarily hurt his ankle in jumping from the baggage car. Or one of my shots may have got him in the leg."

"No, he was limping before you shot, I think," Jean said.

"Mr. Landis says the car was an old Buick." The chief of police was regarding her now with hopeful confidence. "Do you agree with him?"

Jean laughed and shrugged. "I've never been able to recognize a car unless it was my own."

The chief studied his book and sighed gently. "You are living at the hotel in the village—in case I would wish to question you further?" Jean nodded, and rose. As she left, she could hear the chief telling Steve of the painstaking and elaborate search his department was making to apprehend the vicious criminals—of the government co-operation they were getting. She saw Steve bringing out his code wires from the company headquarters. They would undoubtedly hold a lengthy conference.

Her phone was ringing when she entered her own office. She lifted the receiver as she sat down at her desk.

"Mr. Landis' office."

Mrs. Parkinson's rich voice came through refreshingly. "I want to ask a favor, darling. Please don't say no."

Jean gave a small, surprised laugh. "That would be ungrateful of me, after that wonderful afternoon at your rancho yesterday?"

"Nonsense, my dear," cried Mrs. Parkinson. "Yesterday was our pleasure. And it's only because I'm greedy that I'm wondering if you could come out and keep me company for three days. I'll be lonely because Curley is flying Mr. Parkinson to Mexico City on a business trip."

"Oh! Grand!" Jean realized her voice betrayed her pleasure—and her hesitation.

"Now, don't consider it please, if it would make trouble with your boss," Mrs. Parkinson said hastily.

For one quick moment Jean saw herself going home for three nights to the spacious, cool rooms and exquisite food at the Rancho Casolina instead of the hot, tiny cubicle at the hotel. "I'm sure he won't mind—for three nights," she cried impulsively.

"Wonderful! We'll expect you for dinner."

Jean replaced the receiver thoughtfully, and a little anxiously. Had her craving for luxury betrayed her? Would Steve be annoyed by her decision to return to the rancho?

STAMPS 15, 16 TO BE USED FOR CANNING SUGAR

Revision of its canning sugar program was announced Saturday by Office of Price Administration, effective immediately.

Stamps No. 15 and 16 in Ration Book 1 will be used to buy sugar for canning, each stamp being valid Monday for five pounds of canning sugar. The coupons will be good until October 31.

Families which cannot can its usual amount of goods with 10 pounds of sugar a person may apply to the local rationing board for more. The 10-pounds-a-person allowance will provide each person with 40 quarts of canned foods, the OPA estimates.

Revision of the plan wherein Stamps 15 and 16 are used does not alter the regular sugar allotment program. Stamp No. 13 in the No. 1 book becomes valid June 1 for five pounds of sugar, this amount being expected to last until August 15.

At the same time OPA announced that blue stamps G, H and I are extended for a week so that retailers will not face an end of the month rush for purchase of canned goods.

Instead of expiring on May 31, as previously announced, blue stamps G, H and I will be good through June 7.

At the same time the price administration agency announced that the next three sets of blue stamps—K, L and M—totaling 49 points, will become valid next Monday and, instead of expiring at the end of June, will continue good through July 7.

Officials said that blue stamps G, H, and I, as well as K, L and M stamps all will be valid during a two-week "overlap" period from May 24 through June 7 as result of the action.

"Change in the expiration date of processed food stamps should make marketing easier for both consumers and retailers and should avoid the congestion that prevailed in many retail stores throughout the country at the end of April," the OPA explained.

"End of the month shopping would have been particularly difficult at the end of May, since not only meat stamps, but sugar and coffee stamps as well, will expire on May 30 and May 31, respectively."

Bible Teachings on Wine's Deceitfulness

"Look not thou upon the wine when it is red," says Proverbs; "at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Who is the faithful and wise servant whom his lord makes ruler of his household? The one that his lord finds working when he cometh.

The evil servant will, in his lord's absence, smite his fellow servants and instead of doing his work, eat and drink with the drunken.

His lord shall cast him out, with the rest of the hypocrites, and "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." (GOLDEN TEXT—Proverbs 23:32)

STAMPS 15, 16 TO BE USED FOR CANNING SUGAR

Revision of its canning sugar program was announced Saturday by Office of Price Administration, effective immediately.

Stamps No. 15 and 16 in Ration Book 1 will be used to buy sugar for canning, each stamp being valid Monday for five pounds of canning sugar. The coupons will be good until October 31.

Families which cannot can its usual amount of goods with 10 pounds of sugar a person may apply to the local rationing board for more. The 10-pounds-a-person allowance will provide each person with 40 quarts of canned foods, the OPA estimates.

Revision of the plan wherein Stamps 15 and 16 are used does not alter the regular sugar allotment program. Stamp No. 13 in the No. 1 book becomes valid June 1 for five pounds of sugar, this amount being expected to last until August 15.

At the same time OPA announced that blue stamps G, H and I are extended for a week so that retailers will not face an end of the month rush for purchase of canned goods.

Instead of expiring on May 31, as previously announced, blue stamps G, H and J will be good through June 7.

At the same time the price administration agency announced that the next three sets of blue stamps—K, L and M—totaling 49 points, will become valid next Monday and, instead of expiring at the end of June, will continue good through July 7.

Officials said that blue stamps G, H, and J, as well as K, L and M stamps all will be valid during a two-week "overlap" period from May 24 through June 7 as result of the action.

"Change in the expiration date of processed food stamps should make marketing easier for both consumers and retailers and should avoid the congestion that prevailed in many retail stores throughout the country at the end of April," the OPA explained.

"End of the month shopping would have been particularly difficult at the end of May, since not only meat stamps, but sugar and coffee stamps as well, will expire on May 30 and May 31, respectively."

Bible Teachings on Wine's Deceitfulness

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Prov. 20:1; 23:29-35; Matt. 24:45-51.

"Look not thou upon the wine when it is red," says Proverbs; "at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Who is the faithful and wise servant whom his lord makes ruler of his household? The one that his lord finds working when he cometh.

The evil servant will, in his lord's absence, smite his fellow servants and instead of doing his work, eat and drink with the drunken.

His lord shall cast him out, with the rest of the hypocrites, and "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." (GOLDEN TEXT—Proverbs 23:32)

WARMERDAM TO TRY AGAIN FOR VAULTING MARK

FRESNO, Cal., May 22—Tonight may be the night that Cornelious Warmerdam pole vaults 16 feet.

He certainly will have every participant in the seventeenth annual Fresno relays and every customer in the stands pulling for him.

It indeed would be fitting for Warmerdam, now an ensign in Uncle Sam's navy, to soar over the 16-foot mark at Ratcliffe stadium for it was in this same stadium that he started his vaulting career.

Fresno State College, which is host at the relays, is Warmerdam's alma mater. He has made leaps well over 15 feet so many times that that no longer is an effort for him. He presently holds the unofficial world records of 15 feet 7½ inches outdoors and 15 feet 8½ inches indoors.

Tonight Ensign Warmerdam will be wearing the colors of the navy's Del Monte pre-flight school.

ARMY PROBING BOMBER CRASH IN FULL TANK

CHICAGO, May 22—Army officials today launched an inquiry into the worst plane disaster in Chicago's history, the crash of a huge four-motored Liberator bomber into a towering gas storage tank which killed all 12 on board.

The bomber, groping its way at only 100 feet altitude through unfavorable weather, smashed yesterday into the 485-foot high tank filled with 18,000,000 cubic feet of illuminating gas, causing a terrific explosion that rocked southwest Chicago.

Flames shot hundreds of feet into the sky. They were followed by a dense pall of smoke which spread over the region as far as used for sealing the tank burned and smoldered most of last night. The tank was said to be the largest in the world.

The tank, except for about 100 feet at the base, was completely demolished by the violence of the explosion and the impact of the heavy bomber. Huge pieces of steel plate, some of them as big as the front of a two-story house, were hurled for 100 yards or more.

The heat was so intense that temperatures rose for nearly a mile away. Windows in some of the homes in the sparsely settled section were too hot to touch.

The tank, erected in 1923 at a cost of $2,000,000, had a capacity of 20,000,000 cubic feet, and was nearly filled.

ODDS OF 1 TO 10 PUT ON FLEET TO COP WITHERS

NEW YORK, May 22—Count Fleet, 3-year-old streak of four-forty lighting, looms today as a 1 to 10 choice to take the 68th running of the $15,000 Withers mile at Belmont today from a field of five distinctly inferior horses.

The punch in the field opposing the Count was yesterday, with the withdrawal by Trainer Walter Kelley of Blue Swords, who has run second to the Count in all of his recent major contests.

What is left will draw less than a smattering of first-place money. The entries and owners are Fairly Manurst, Foxcatcher Farms; Slide Rule, W. E. Boeing; Too Timely, King Ranch; Tip-Toe, Belair Stud; Bankrupt, T. B. Martin. None of these is generally conceded to be as good as Blue Swords.

The proud son of Reigh Count will seek the fifteenth victory of his ball-of-fire career and his fifth straight this Spring. His wins in 1943, all of them easy, include the Wood, the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. A victory in the Withers for the Count will bring owner Mrs. John D. Hertz a total of over $216,000 earned since she bought him as a two-year-old.

Count Fleet is shooting at two marks in the Withers. The first is the feat of Sir Barton who, in 1919, annexed the triple crown derby, Preakness, Belmont Stakes, and the Withers, something no horse accomplished before or since. After the Withers, the Count will run in the Belmont on June 5.

The second mark is the time of 1:35-4/5 in the Withers held in a three-way tie by Man O'War, Snob II and Johnstown.

All entries today will carry 126 pounds except Fairly Manurst and Too Timely, each weighted with 121.

Two Castoffs Do Neat Jobs To Help Dodgers

By John Cashman

NEW YORK, May 22—Two castoffs who are now mainstays in the inner workings of the Brooklyn Dodgers—Third Baseman Billy Herman and Pitcher Rube Melton—are today laughing at the clubs that discarded them.

Jimmy Gallagher, general manager of the Chicago Cubs, felt pretty good in May, 1941, when he released Herman to the Dodgers in exchange for Outfielder Charley Gilbert, Infielder Johnny Hudson, and approximately $25,000. It looked like a particularly fine deal.

And it would have been, too, if it were not for the fact that both Hudson and Gilbert descended to the minors and Herman, stolid, serious and dangerous at the plate, made himself a valuable Brooklyn fixture. While the Cubs are now nesting in last place, with seven games won and 19 lost, Herman the man who could have helped them, is now leading National League batters in runs driven in, with 20—and his club is on top.

Although the other castoff, Melton, distinguished himself by winning his second game over the St. Louis Cardinals Thursday with only a two-day rest, much of the credit belonged to Herman. Billy contributed to Mort Cooper's downfall by slamming out a first-inning double with the two out that brought in two runs. In the seventh, he connected for another

CROSBY AND HOPE HELP SWELL SERVICE FUNDS

PHILADELPHIA, May 22—It was all good clean fun, rain and mud at the Llanerch country club as Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, pursued by an uproarious crowd of 6,000, played a "streamlined" game of five holes in which nobody but the Navy League and Uncle Sam came out victorious.

Approximately $130,000 in War Bonds were sold; the service was enriched by about $6,000, and everybody, except the poor cops assigned to keep the galleries from stampeding the radio and screen, had themselves a time.

The comics were teamed with big Ed Dudley, national PGA president, and Harold "Jug" McSpaden, of the Philadelphia Country Club, but nobody seems to remember much about them. Chisnel, chinned Bob, who had calmly asked the course record a few minutes before, had a ball of chalk composition explode under the power of a drive which was meant to send it 250 yards, or thereabouts.

On one tee the "players" were confronted with a 12-inch cup, on the next with a three-inch cup. (Standard is 4½ inches.)

Cotton supply parachutes are being used increasingly in the South Pacific to serve the U. S. fighters in lonely outposts and advanced positions. These parachutes deliver food, arms, ammunition, double to score Dolph Camilli, who had tripled. In this manner, Billy smashed in three runs in the 5 to 2 victory which enabled the Dodgers to break even in their first series with the Cards.

Melton Is Hero

Melton, who was shifted upstairs from the Philadelphia Phillies this year, is the hero of the hour in Brooklyn. The Phillies, fighting desperately and rating their best chance since the great flood, would already have edged the Cards out of third place if a gentleman of Melton's calibre were carrying part of the Philadelphia pitching load.

Melton, strangely enough, was unwilling to travel to Brooklyn or to any other club at the beginning of the 1943 season. He showed his unwillingness by being so tardy in reporting for duty to Martinet Branch Rickey that he was fined $1,000.

After Thursday's performance, Melton rushed into a conference in the Dodgers' office with Rickey and Manager Leo Durocher. He emerged from Brooklyn's cave of the winds beaming brightly, bearing the news that his fine had been called off.

The reason why Melton's fine was forgotten was not merely because he had won two games in four days, but because Rube is a dream come true in Rickey's eyes. Rickey is a follower of the ancient and all but outmoded belief that a good pitcher doesn't mind hard labor, even the hardest labor. Melton took his second game from the Cards and complained of nothing but a slight tiredness of the arm before the game. The throwback to the days of work-horse Walter Johnson put substance in the rugged belief of Rickey, who said:

"Sure, he can pitch with but two days of rest. So can a lot of other pitchers. The belief that a pitcher must have four or five days' rest between games is the most common fallacy in the pitching field."

With which the two castoffs, one looking south and the other west, gave vent to a long and hearty chuckle.

MYTH OF BEAU JACK BLASTED BY MONTGOMERY

Philadelphia Negro Upse Georgian Before 18,343 Fans In Garden

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, May 22 — Like a master teaching a novice the rudiments of his art, Bob Montgomery beat Beau Jack and today stands as the New York Commission's world lightweight champion in one of the outstanding upsets in many months. The story of the fight is the story of one man who knew his business against another who was still learning. Montgomery is far from a great champion. He is just another fighter, in fact, but he will beat the likes of Beau Jack in droves with one hand tied behind his back.

That's how one-sided last night's 15-round title engagement turned out to be contrary to betting odds that soared to 12 to 5 on Beau Jack, the former Georgia boot black who had won 16 in a row of clinch fictitious claims to the title relinquished by Sammy Angott last year.

Ironically, the Montgomery victory makes Angott the uncrowned lightweight champion—paradoxical as that may seem. The point is, Angott whipped Montgomery three out of three while the former title-holder and now that he has started a comeback the obvious solution to everything is an Angott-Montgomery bout, which would be in keeping with the National Boxing Association's aim to establish an undisputed title-holder for the 135-pound division.

18,343 In Crowd

Last night it was strictly a Montgomery party before 18,343 spectators who paid an almost incredible $94,500 to see the show surpassing by several thousand Promoter Mike Jacobs predictions on the receipts.

Montgomery, who hails originally from South Carolina but now a resident of Philadelphia, took a terrible drubbing in the first round of the battle. Seemingly he was headed straight for a defeat in his first title challenge after five over-the-weight matches with champions.

He lost the first round by a wide margin in the face of a flurry of uppercuts and the free-wheeling Beau Jack attack. Then he settled down and methodically won the fight with a right hand—a right hand sucker punch. Every body in the place except Beau Jack knew when that right was coming. Only Beau Jack failed to duck it—round after weary round.

Beau Jack waved a left jab at swung with his uppercuts mostly from the floor, but Montgomery kept forcing the fight and for a few times in each round slammed in that straight right hand punch to the chin to come fairly close to scoring a knockout. That happened repeatedly. Beau Jack meantime never landed one good telling blow, and in even the first round when he had all the best of it, scored strictly by punching from all angles without any telling effect.

11 Against Four

The latter point was proved by the way Montgomery came back to win the second, third and fourth round in a row and to wind up with 11 rounds against four, according to my score sheet.

It was a bruising, fast slugging fight in which Beau Jack fought both of his eyes virtually closed tight, his nose bleeding throughout the 15 rounds and with Montgomery cut above one eye.

WARMERDAM TO TRY AGAIN FOR VAULTING MARK

FRESNO, Cal., May 22—Tonight may be the night that Cornelious Warmerdam pole vaults 16 feet.

He certainly will have every participant in the seventeenth annual Fresno relays and every customer in the stands pulling for him.

It indeed would be fitting for Warmerdam, now an ensign in Uncle Sam's navy, to soar over the 16-foot mark at Ratcliffe stadium for it was in this same stadium that he started his vaulting career.

Fresno State College, which is host at the relays, is Warmerdam's alma mater. He has made leaps well over 15 feet so many times that that no longer is an effort for him. He presently holds the unofficial world records of 15 feet 7 1/2 inches outdoors and 15 feet 8 1/2 inches indoors.

Tonight Ensign Warmerdam will be wearing the colors of the navy's Del Monte pre-flight school.

ARMY PROBING BOMBER CRASH IN FULL TANK

CHICAGO, May 22—Army officials today launched an inquiry into the worst plane disaster in Chicago's history, the crash of a huge four-motored Liberator bomber into a towering gas storage tank which killed all 12 on board.

The bomber, groping its way at only 100 feet altitude through unfavorable weather, smashed yesterday into the 485-foot high tank filled with 18,000,000 cubic feet of illuminating gas, causing a terrific explosion that rocked southwest Chicago.

Flames shot hundreds of feet into the sky. They were followed by a dense pall of smoke which spread over the region as far as used for sealing the tank burned and smoldered most of last night. The tank was said to be the largest in the world.

The tank, except for about 100 feet at the base, was completely demolished by the violence of the explosion and the impact of the heavy bomber. Huge pieces of steel plate, some of them as big as the front of a two-story house, were hurled for 100 yards or more.

The heat was so intense that temperatures rose for nearly a mile away. Windows in some of the homes in the sparsely settled section were too hot to touch.

The tank, erected in 1925 at a cost of $2,000,000, had a capacity of 20,000,000 cubic feet, and was nearly filled.

Beau Jack waved a left jab around with his uppercuts mostly from the floor, but Montgomery kept forcing the fight and for a few times in each round slammed in that straight right hand punch to the chin to come fairly close to scoring a knockout. That happened repeatedly. Beau Jack meantime never landed one good telling blow, and in even the first round when he had all the best of it, scored strictly by punching from all angles without any telling effect.

11 Against Four

The latter point was proved by the way Montgomery came back to win the second, third and fourth round in a row and to wind up with 11 rounds against four, according to my score sheet.

It was a bruising, fast slugging fight in which Beau Jack fought both of his eyes virtually closed tight, his nose bleeding throughout the 15 rounds and with Montgomery cut above one eye.

Something new and different in radio entertainment—a dance band designed to be the best in the land, and featuring a guest band leader each week, will make its bow as "The Million Dollar Band" over the NBC network Saturday, May 29 at 7 p. m.

Thirty-four players, each one a soloist in his own right; orchestrations by the country's foremost arrangers; a mixed quartet, "The Double Daters"; weekly guest appearances by outstanding guest band leaders—and for master of ceremonies, the singing star, Barry Wood. These are highlights of the new program.

Charlie Spivak, the man who plays the sweetest trumpet in the world—who studied his instrument under a symphony artist—who has played with Paul Specht, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Ray Noble, etc.—who shattered all records at the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York—and who is now being groomed for Hollywood fame—is to be the first guest leader on the program.

NATION AT WAR

The Blue network radio show, This Nation At War, staged in cooperation with the National Association of Manufacturers, will celebrate its first anniversary on the air at 9:30 Tuesday night, May 25.

The first birthday program of This Nation At War, dedicated to the wartime role of radio broadcasting, will feature an interview between Mack Woods, president of the Blue Network, and Walter B. Weisenburger, executive vice-president of NAM. Mr. Weisenburger will question Mr. Woods on some of the difficulties and problems of broadcasters in time of war.

The spotlight then will be turned on the wartime activities of a typical, small independent station when the program shifts to Shenandoah, Ia., for a pickup from KMA, which will be cited for its long-range program of working with the farmer.

High above the advanced flying training field at Stockton, Cal., Bill Baldwin, west coast director of special events for the Blue network, will take the microphone to broadcast from an observation plane a description of the aerobatic maneuvers of seven army ships.

SALUTES SEABEES

The famed "Seabees," the Navy's construction battalion which has distinguished itself on world battlefronts, will be saluted by Kate Smith when she broadcasts from the "CB" Camp Endicott, Rhode Island, Friday, May 28.

Nashville, Tennessee, has often been referred to as the Athens of the South, the home of presidents, or the site of many historical shrines, yet today the first question asked by many travelers and visitors upon entering the historic old Southern city, is: "Where can we go to see the Grand Ole Opry?" In spite of rationing and travel restrictions, guests from as many as twenty-two different states are still coming to the Saturday night show.

POEM FOR SPRING

Sammy Kaye will read a poem, "Spring Souvenirs," by Lyla Myers, on his "Sunday Serenade" program May 23 in tribute to the belated Spring weather. His usual program of soft and soothing music will again be featured.

Navy Land Cruiser To Dock In Circleville Wednesday.

SHIP TO BRING INFORMATION ON WAVES, SPARS

Important Shore Jobs On List Of Vacancies In Department

HIGH BANDS TO PLAY

Craft To Arrive In Morning And Spend Entire Day In City

Navy's 'Land Cruiser' Visits Circleville Next Week

THE navy's 'land cruiser', assigned to many cities in Ohio to help recruit sailors, WAVES and SPARS, will appear in Circleville all day next Wednesday. The interesting 'ship' will be accompanied by a crew of recruiting officers.

A "land cruiser" with most of the appointments and equipment of a regular ship, manned by a regular Navy crew and observing all Navy customs and regulations, will be "docked" in Circleville all day next Wednesday. The cruiser will "anchor" at the northeast corner of Court and Main streets. The main purpose of the cruiser visit is to bring complete information on the WAVES and SPARS to women of Pickaway county between the ages of 20 and 36.

There are quarters aboard the ship for four men, and just as they would do at sea the crew sleeps on board in special bunks built in the trailer. There are cooking facilities and hot and cold running water available. The crew makes colors every morning and evening during its tour of Ohio, and everything that is customarily done aboard a ship of Uncle Sam's Navy at sea will be observed during its visit to Circleville.

Main interest of the recruiting cruiser is to bring information on WAVES and SPARS to every qualified woman in Pickaway county. The Navy needs women who are not now engaged in vital war work to take over important shore jobs that are now being held by men. These men will then be released for more active duty with the fighting fleet at sea.

Volunteers Needed

Women accepted for service in the WAVES and SPARS will be sent to Hunter College in New York City for their training period and after that will be assigned to various Navy bases and shore stations within the continental limits of the United States. Women are needed as stenographers, storekeepers, parachute riggers, for radio and communications work, personnel and contact positions, and the Navy hospital corps needs many women with nursing and hospital training. In fact most every civilian position now held by women has its counterpart in the Navy.

In addition to information on WAVES and SPARS, the cruiser crew will carry complete data on the Seabees, the fighting builders of the U. S. Navy. The Seabees, phonetic contraction of Construction Battalion, build the advance and mobile bases that are so important in this global war. Men are needed between the ages of 18 and 50 who have a background in any of the various construction and building trades and professions, and these men can be enlisted in the Navy and then rated commensurate with their civilian skill.

Bands To Play

One of the highlights of the day's program will be a concert at 3 p. m. by the junior and senior school bands under the direction of C. F. Zaenglein. The combined band will march from the school to the "anchor" site of the cruiser and will present a half hour concert. Arrangements for this program were completed through Frank Fischer, school superintendent. This concert is open to the public and everyone is invited to attend.

The cruiser visit will also be highlighted by the visit of two Naval officers when Lieut. F. A. Duffy, officer in charge of the Columbus recruiting district, and Ensign Verona James, WAVES' interviewing officer, arrive to participate in the cruiser program. Both Lieut. Duffy and Ensign James will be available for interviews during the day and evening.

The cruiser will arrive in Circleville about 10 a. m. and will remain throughout the day and evening before continuing on its cruise.

the side of the deck, plus high-ceilinged saloons which could become hangars.

Vickery even went before Congress secretly and got the money voted for these ships. After all this work, however, the Navy vetoed the plan. It wrote a letter saying it would not need these converted carriers. Japan, however, learned about the idea and built this identical type of ship herself.

Note: Two years later, a few days after Pearl Harbor, the Navy proposed that most of our big passenger vessels—the Manhattan, Washington, Mariposa, Monterey—be converted to carriers exactly as Vickery had proposed. But this would have taken 70 percent of our troop transports and the Maritime Commission said no.

PROPHET "OSTRACIZED"

Meanwhile, another Admiral, once spurned by the Navy, came into the picture. He was Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of Naval Operations under Hoover, who agreed at the 1930 London Naval Conference that smaller cruisers were valuable in addition to large cruisers. (Guadalcanal certainly proved he was right). Because Pratt did not stand 100 percent behind the 10,000 ton cruiser, other Navy men claimed he had "sold out" to the British. When Pratt retired as Chief of Naval Operations, few came to say good-bye. He was almost ostracized.

Since the war, however, Pratt has come back to Washington from his home at Bath, Maine, and more than a year ago, he and Admiral Vickery went to work again on converting a small number of previously constructed merchant vessels into airplane carriers. This was done on a very limited scale. But it happened that the first one converted was commanded by Harry Hopkins' brother-in-law.

He was so pleased with the ship that Hopkins, in charge of Lend-Lease, told the British about it. The U. S. Navy was still working on grandiose plans for big airplane carriers requiring about two years to build. But the British were interested in the possibility of quick carriers converted from merchant ships. So Hopkins called in Maritime Commission's Vickery. "How would you like to spare 100 of your cargo ships for airplane carriers?" Hopkins asked Vickery, having in mind lending them to the British.

"It would be just like taking away my children," replied Vickery.

However, he went ahead and turned several shipyards, making fast merchant ships, to the production of airplane carriers. This was done entirely on the responsibility of the Maritime Commission. The Navy had nothing to do with it.

KAISER TAKES A HAND

Later, Henry Kaiser wanted to put an airplane carrier deck on Liberty vessels, but Admiral Vickery told him it would make the vessels top-heavy and he should go to see William F. Gibbs, the naval designer, and get him to draw a design. Architect Gibbs fiddled around with the plans for some time, got nowhere.

So Kaiser came back to the Maritime Commission, which itself made the drawings for converting Liberty ships into airplane carriers. The drawings were sent over to the Navy Department, but the Navy would have none of it. Kaiser, however, went ahead.

And those are the airplane carriers, which Secretary of Navy Knox has now ballyhooed as if they were the great achievement of a Navy which was still dreaming about giant battlewagons requiring a couple of years to build.

Navy Land Cruiser To Dock In Circleville Wednesday.

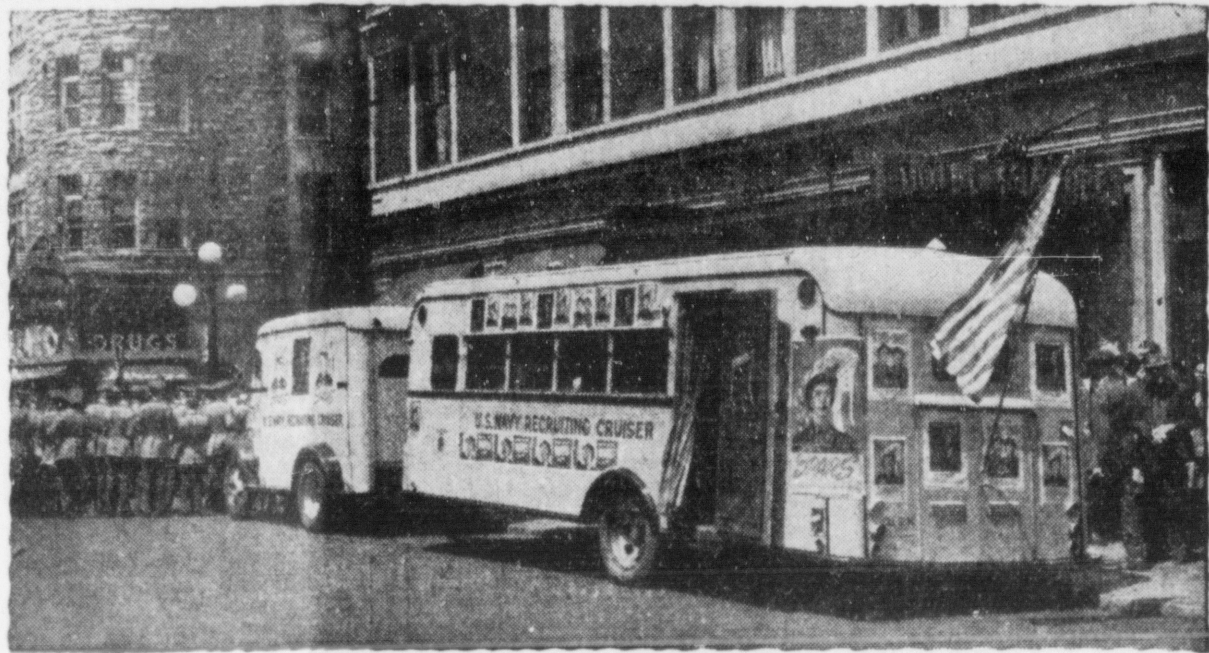

SHIP TO BRING INFORMATION ON WAVES, SPARS

Important Shore Jobs On List Of Vacancies In Department

HIGH BANDS TO PLAY

Craft To Arrive In Morning And Spend Entire Day In City

Navy's 'Land Cruiser' Visits Circleville Next Week

THE navy's 'land cruiser', assigned to many cities in Ohio to help recruit sailors, WAVES and SPARS, will appear in Circleville all day next Wednesday. The interesting 'ship' will be accompanied by a crew of recruiting officers.

A "land cruiser" with most of the appointments and equipment of a regular ship, manned by a regular Navy crew and observing all Navy customs and regulations, will be "docked" in Circleville all day next Wednesday. The cruiser will "anchor" at the northeast corner of Court and Main streets. The main purpose of the cruiser visit is to bring complete information on the WAVES and SPARS to women of Pickaway county between the ages of 20 and 36.

There are quarters aboard the ship for four men, and just as they would do at sea the crew sleeps on board in special bunks built in the trailer. There are cooking facilities and hot and cold running water available. The crew makes colors every morning and evening during its tour of Ohio, and everything that is customarily done aboard a ship of Uncle Sam's Navy at sea will be observed during its visit to Circleville.

Main interest of the recruiting cruiser is to bring information on WAVES and SPARS to every qualified woman in Pickaway county. The Navy needs women who are not now engaged in vital war work to take over important shore jobs that are now being held by men. These men will then be released for more active duty with the fighting fleet at sea.

Volunteers Needed

Women accepted for service in the WAVES and SPARS will be sent to Hunter College in New York City for their training period and after that will be assigned to various Navy bases and shore stations within the continental limits of the United States. Women are needed as stenographers, storekeepers, parachute riggers, for radio and communications work, personnel and contact positions, and the Navy hospital corps needs many women with nursing and hospital training. In fact most every civilian position now held by women has its counterpart in the Navy.

In addition to information on WAVES and SPARS, the cruiser crew will carry complete data on the Seabees, the fighting builders of the U. S. Navy. The Seabees, phonetic contraction of Construction Battalion, build the advance and mobile bases that are so important in this global war. Men are needed between the ages of 18 and 50 who have a background in any of the various construction and building trades and professions, and these men can be enlisted in the Navy and then rated commensurate with their civilian skill.

Bands To Play

One of the highlights of the day's program will be a concert at 3 p. m. by the junior and senior school bands under the direction of C. F. Zaenglein. The combined band will march from the school to the "anchor" site of the cruiser and will present a half hour concert. Arrangements for this program were completed through Frank Fischer, school superintendent. This concert is open to the public and everyone is invited to attend.

The cruiser visit will also be highlighted by the visit of two Navy officers by the visit of two Navy officers in charge of the Columbus recruiting district, and Ensign Verona James, WAVES interviewing officer, arrive to participate in the cruiser program. Both Lieut. Duffy and Ensign James will be available for interviews during the day and evening.

The cruiser will arrive in Circleville about 10 a. m. and will remain throughout the day and evening before continuing on its cruise.

the side of the deck, plus high-ceilinged saloons which could become hangars.

Vickery even went before Congress secretly and got the money voted for these ships. After all this work, however, the Navy vetoed the plan. It wrote a letter saying it would not need these converted carriers. Japan, however, learned about the idea and built this identical type of ship herself.

Note: Two years later, a few days after Pearl Harbor, the Navy proposed that most of our big passenger vessels—the Manhattan, Washington, Mariposa, Monterey—be converted to carriers exactly as Vickery had proposed. But this would have taken 70 percent of our troop transports and the Maritime Commission said no.

PROPHET "OSTRACIZED"

Meanwhile, another Admiral, once spurned by the Navy, came into the picture. He was Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of Naval Operations under Hoover, who agreed at the 1930 London Naval Conference that smaller cruisers were valuable in addition to large cruisers. (Guadalcanal certainly proved he was right). Because Pratt did not stand 100 percent behind the 10,000 ton cruiser, other Navy men claimed he had "sold out" to the British. When Pratt retired as Chief of Naval Operations, few came to say good-bye. He was almost ostracized.

Since the war, however, Pratt has come back to Washington from his home at Bath, Maine, and more than a year ago, he and Admiral Vickery went to work again on converting a small number of previously constructed merchant vessels into airplane carriers. This was done on a very limited scale. But it happened that the first one converted was commanded by Harry Hopkins' brother-in-law.

He was so pleased with the ship that Hopkins was in charge of Lend-Lease, told the British about it. The U. S. Navy was still working on grandiose plans for big airplane carriers requiring about two years to build. But the British were interested in the possibility of quick carriers converted from merchant ships. So Hopkins called in Maritime Commission's Vickery.

"How would you like to spare 100 of your cargo ships for airplane carriers?" Hopkins asked Vickery, having in mind lending them to the British.

"It would be just like taking away my children," replied Vickery.

However, he went ahead and turned several shipyards, making fast merchant ships, to the production of airplane carriers. This was done entirely on the responsibility of the Maritime Commission. The Navy had nothing to do with it.

KAISER TAKES A HAND

Later, Henry Kaiser wanted to put an airplane carrier deck on Liberty vessels, but Admiral Vickery told him it would make the vessels too-heavy and he should go to see William F. Gibbs, the naval designer, and get him to draw a design. Architect Gibbs fiddled around with the plans for some time, got nowhere.

So Kaiser came back to the Maritime Commission, which itself made the drawings for converting Liberty ships into airplane carriers. The drawings were sent over to the Navy Department, but the Navy would have none of it. Kaiser, however, went ahead.

And those are the airplane carriers, which Secretary of Navy Knox has now ballyhooed as if they were the great achievement of a Navy which was still dreaming about giant battlewagons requiring a couple of years to build.
